

Senior Matthew Hommel recently won a 1st place medal in SKILLS USA Industrial Motor Control district competition. “Being involved in SKILLS has helped me to realize the career paths I find most interesting,” Hommel said. “It also gave me the confidence needed to pursue higher goals and to never give up on them.” Hommel is also a member of National Honor Society, and he finds time to raise money for Relay for Life. “Volunteer work has really opened my eyes to the importance of the good citizens around the world that help those who need it,” he said. Hommel is attending Penn State University in the fall.

Senior Jamie McKeon is a well-rounded student athlete who wears many different “faces” at Delaware Valley High School. McKeon is a member of the softball team, ski and snowboarding club, Student Council, Teens Against Tobacco Use, Mu Alpha Theta and is the face of the Warrior, the school’s mascot. “Getting involved exposed me to new people, ideas, and opportunities,” she said. “It also helped me with leadership roles and working with others.” She is on the Relay for Life committee and acts as a team member. Also, McKeon volunteers for the local food drive. “Volunteering has helped me appreciate what people do for others,” she said. She will be attending Temple University in the fall.
