THIS DAY IN HISTORY

In 1951, the first atomic reactor to be used in medical therapy treated its first patient at the Brookhaven National Laboratory, Upton, NY. The Brookhaven Graphite Research Reactor (BGRR) began the experimental treatment of brain cancer using neutrons from the reactor. In the following two years, ten patients were treated with boron neutron capture therapy (BNCT).

INSPIRATION

Success Strategies

Study Greatness.
George Washington was just 16 when he compiled rules of etiquette he would study and follow.

Persevere.
"If I withdraw, all will be lost," he said. After the war, he again put duty first, deciding against retirement to help stabilize the new nation.

Practice Servant Leadership.
Washington rejected the title of king, instead choosing democratic election as president and remaining accountable to voters.

Remain Impartial.
Leaning toward one faction or the other tends to diminish your power and influence
